Corvette News:

C-7 Production is done:

The last C7-generation Corvette, a manual Z06, was just auctioned off at Barrett-Jackson's Northeast Auction at Mohegan Sun Casino for $2.7 million, all of which will go to charity..

https://www.roadandtrack.com/new-cars/a28242745/last-c7-corvette-sold-for-2-7-million/?source=nl&utm_source=nl_rdt&utm_medium=email&date=070119&src=nl&utm_campaign=17349113

Finally, the C-8 Corvette is here:

On July 18th at the former El Toro Marine Air Station blimp hanger GM introduced the new 2020 C-8 Corvette. 495 h.p. and base price under $60,000. For those worried about luggage space, they report it can hold the same 5 piece luggage set as the C-7 (in spite of having 2.5 cu ft less space, 13 vs. 15.7) at least until the electric motors of the hybrid take the “frunk” space.

While I don't like the 4 square exhaust tips at the lower corner rather than dual “cannons” through the rear valance the later is not possible due to the rear 2 golf bag sized luggage area.

By July 28th GM was reporting that the first year's production is nearly sold out!

CORVETTE RACING AT LIME ROCK: Weathering the Weather

Corvette C7.Rs finish fifth, sixth in GT-only round at steamy Lime Rock

LAKEVILLE, Conn. (July 20, 2019) – Corvette Racing sweat its way through the Northeast Grand Prix on Saturday to fifth- and sixth-place finish in the IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship.

Hoping to replicate one of its finest moments – the 100th victory in program history – the pair of Chevrolet Corvette C7.Rs came short in scoring victory No. 100 in IMSA competition. The pair of velocity yellow Mobil 1/SiriusXM Corvettes finished where they began on a sweltering July afternoon.

“He needs to get off the couch and get some exercise. So, each week I send him a fake letter saying he won a new Corvette. Works every time.”
